A northeast Ohio sheriff's deputy has been fired for ordering five inmates to dance to a song by Usher in exchange for privileges such as using a phone or microwave. Some students at the Indiana University Kelley School of Business are getting a late lesson in supply and demand: They might have to buy tickets to their own graduation Friday from scalpers. Student Shannon Beatty says students are selling tickets for $200 apiece. (AP)

Letters Portray a Weak Al-Qaeda

Military declassifies documents seized from bin Laden raid

Washington

Letters from Osama bin Laden's last hideaway, released by U.S. officials intent on discrediting his terror organization, portray a network weak, inept and under siege — and its leader seemingly near wit's end about the passing of his global jihad's glory days.

The documents, published online Thursday by the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, are a small sample of those seized during the raid on bin Laden's Pakistan compound in which he was killed a year ago. By no accident, they show al-Qaeda at its worst. The raid has become the signature national security moment of Barack Obama's presidency and one he is eager to emphasize in his re-election campaign.

Those ends are served in the 17 documents chosen by U.S. officials for the world to see — not to mention American voters. The Obama administration has refused

AP PHOTOS/EXPRESS ILLUSTRATION

Document Highlights

SEPT. 11 PLANS: It appeared Osama bin Laden was unaware of the planned bombing of Times Square in New York in May 2010 by al-Qaeda associates in Pakistan, but he was disappointed that it failed.

ATTACK AMERICA: Bin Laden wanted al-Qaeda to focus on the U.S.: "Even though we have the chance to attack the British, we should not waste our effort to do so but concentrate on defeating America," reads one letter.

ON THE U.S. MEDIA: Adam Gadahn, one of bin Laden's spokesmen, provided a summary of his view of U.S. TV cable news:

"From the professional point of view, they are all on one level except [FOX News] channel, which falls into the abyss as you know, and lacks neutrality too."

"ABC channel is all right; actually it could be one of the best channels, as far as we are concerned. It is interested in al-Qa'ida issues," Gadahn wrote. Bin Laden himself mentioned CBS as a possibly unbiased network. (AP) to release a fuller record of its bin Laden collection, making it difficult to glean any larger truths.

What is clear from the documents released so far is that bin Laden and his inner circle struggled to keep the focus of Islamic terrorism on killing Americans and tamp down attacks by al-Qaeda affiliates on Muslim innocents. The documents describe the U.S. as "a malicious tree with a huge trunk," and its allies as mere branches not worth al-Qaeda's time.

The documents, which date from September 2006 to April 2011, were declassified by U.S. intelligence officials. As part of the declassification process, intelligence officials withheld any documents that they felt could inflame anti-American sentiment.

The release was the latest beat in a drumroll from the Obama administration. Over several weeks, officials have leaked select documents seized in the raid, Obama has made a surprise visit to Afghanistan and the president and senior officials have made themselves available for an hour-long show about the raid on NBC. Slow Going for Economy

Hiring, housing seem to be improving, but not accelerating yet

Washington

The U.S. economy's recovery looks enduring. It's just not very strong.

Hiring, housing, consumer spending and manufacturing all appear to be improving, yet remain less than healthy. Economists surveyed expect growth to pick up this year, though not enough to lower unemployment much.

A clearer picture of the nation's economic health will emerge Friday, when the government reveals how many jobs employers added in April.

"The outlook is for continued
moderate growth," John Williams, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, said in a speech Thursday. "Nonetheless, we have nearly 4½ million fewer jobs

Vital Signs

The government's economic data have been sending mixed signals about the health of the recovery from the Great Recession. Here's a look at the economy's vital signs:

► JOBS: The job market is gradually improving. On Thursday, the government said the number of people who applied for unemployment benefits last week fell by a sharper-than-expected 27,000 to a seasonally adjusted 365,000.

► HOUSING: Economists say housing growth can't accelerate until national home prices finally hit bottom. Still, spending on home construction and renovations rose from January through March by the most in nearly two years.

► CONSUMERS: Americans have proved surprisingly willing to spend.
In the first three months of the year, consumer spending grew at an annual pace of 2.9 percent, the fastest in more than a year. (AP) today than five years ago, and the unemployment rate remains very high at 8.2 percent."

The 32 economists polled by the AP late last month are confident the economy has entered a "virtuous cycle" in which more hiring boosts consumer spending, which leads to further hiring and spending. They expect unemployment to drop from 8.2 percent in March to below 8 percent by Election Day.

But they still think the rate won't reach a historically normal level below 6 percent until 2015 or later. And they predict hiring will slow the rest of this year from a relatively brisk December-February pace. PAUL WISEMAN (AP)

Hazing Clouds FAMU Band's Future

Tallahassee, Fla.

Now that 13 people have been major, the future is murky for a famed marching band that has

Grammys, presidential inaugu-

The band was suspended immediately after Robert Champion's death in November, and even the governor says it's far too soon for the Marching 100 to take the field again. Champion's mother,

Pam, took that even a step further: She said the band should be disbanded so the university can "clean house." She and the family's attorney contend there is a vast effort among students and others to cover up who is responsible for her son's death.

"If you don't clean the filth out it just stays there," she said Thursday. "You can't move forward as business as usual."

Eleven people — all band members — have been charged with felony hazing resulting in death, said Gretl Plessinger, a Florida Department of Law Enforcement spokeswoman. Eight of them had been arrested by Thursday. Two others face misdemeanor charges. (AP)

Britain's military showed off a weapon Thursday it hopes it never has to use: The Rapier surface-to-air missile system, which has the power to take down a Boeing 747 to protect a stadium full of 80,000 Olympic spectators in a terrorism nightmare scenario. The British military insists the missiles would be deployed only as a last line of defense. (AP)

Blind Activist Seeks Flight to U.S.

Dissident backs off from deal allowing him to stay in China

Beijing

The diplomatic disarray deepened Thursday after a blind activist reversed course and asked to leave China with his family, abandoning an arduously negotiated agreement even though he had left the protection of the U.S. Embassy and was in a Beijing hospital ringed by Chinese police.

Activist Chen Guangcheng, 40, spent most of the last seven years in prison or under house arrest in China.

Bewildered and alone with his wife and children, Chen Guangcheng periodically switched on a cellphone to tell friends and foreign media he felt scared and wanted to go abroad, and that he had not seen U.S. officials in over a day.

Chen also felt abandoned by the U.S., finding no embassy staff at the hospital to assure his protection.

"The embassy told me that they would have someone accompany me the whole time," he said in a telephone interview late Wednesday. "I felt they did not tell me the truth on this issue."

Chen's high-profile effort to keep his case in the public eye served to increase pressure on Washington and embarrass Beijing as it hosted Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and other U.S. officials for annual talks on global political and economic hotspots.

Taken aback at his change of heart, U.S. diplomats spent much of Thursday trying to confirm that the family wanted to leave, and they said they would try to help him. Still, it remained unclear whether Beijing would be willing to renegotiate a deal that both sides thought had been settled a day earlier.

On Thursday, Chen sent a message through a friend clarifying that he does not seek asylum from the U.S. but wants to travel or study in the U.S. temporarily.

The self-taught lawyer, 40, has been persecuted for years by local authorities for his advocacy against forced abortions and other official misdeeds.

His escape from house arrest to the fortresslike U.S. Embassy in Beijing last week inserted Washington in the center of a human-rights case, always a testy issue for Beijing.

Chen said throughout his six days at the embassy that his desire was to remain in China, and U.S. diplomats said that was their goal in talks with China. CHARLES HUTZLER AND MATTHEW LEE (AP)

Tensions Simmer After Clashes in Egypt

COILS OF BARBED WIRE IN CAIRO separate protesters from Egyptian security forces Thursday, a day after deadly clashes brought fresh accusations that the military was trying to sow chaos so it could cling to power. Egypt's ruling generals repeated their pledge Thursday to transfer power to a civilian government after presidential elections within two months.

U.S.: Syria Truce Nears 'Defeat'

Washington

It may be time for the world to acknowledge that Syria's cease-fire is not holding, and that it is time to try a new approach, the White House said Thursday.

"If the regime's intransigence continues, the international community is going to have to admit defeat," White House press secretary Jay Carney said.

It was the clearest signal yet that the Obama administration sees little chance for U.N. envoy Kofi Annan's peace plan, which has been largely ignored by President Bashar Assad's forces.

Meanwhile, Syrian forces stormed student dormitories at Aleppo University in a siege that killed at least four students. (AP)

Polls in France show incumbent President Nicolas Sarkozy, left, is trailing Socialist Francois Hollande in the country's election.

Key French Vote at Hand

Hollande is poised to knock Sarkozy from presidency

Paris

Socialist candidate Francois Hollande on Thursday appeared to solidify his chances at winning France's presidency on Sunday after voters welcomed his strong showing in a debate against beleaguered incumbent Nicolas Sarkozy.

Hollande also won the support of prominent centrist Francois Bayrou, who came in fourth in the first round of presidential elections.

The conservative Sarkozy made his mark on the world arena but let down voters at home, and may well be out of a job within days. He has trailed Hollande in the polls and needed a knockout performance in Wednesday night's debate.

"Now the campaign is pretty much finished," Gael Sliman, a pollster at BVA agency, told the Associ-

What's at Stake?

French voters on Sunday choose their president, either incumbent Nicolas Sarkozy or challenger Francois Hollande, in a race that has wide implications:

- Eurozone's debt crisis: Sarkozy's solution: more cost-cutting to bring down debts. Hollande's solution: more stimulus to revive growth.
- Diplomacy: Sarkozy might be the most U.S.-friendly French leader in 50 years. Hollande wants French troops out of Afghanistan earlier.
- Taxes: Hollande wants the rich to pay 75 percent in income taxes. Sarkozy wants to reduce France's overall tax burden, but is promising higher sales tax. (AP) ern France and echoed the stances declared in the debate.

The result of Sunday's runoff will set the course for the next five years for France.

Millions of French voters are determined to prevent Sarkozy from winning a second term, and polls predict Hollande could win by as much as a 12-percent margin.

Satirical puppet show "Les Guignols de l'info" has already made its election prediction: Its episode on Sunday showed first lady Carla Bruni-Sarkozy, an Italian heiress and former supermodel, packing a suitcase for Switzerland, to avoid the 75-percent tax on very high incomes that Hollande has promised to impose. The 64-year-old Taylor will be sentenced next month at the Special Court for Sierra Leone for aiding and abetting murder and rape and for his part in arming Sierra Leone rebels in exchange for "blood diamonds" mined by slave laborers. 'Forget You, Philly'

Nats take a stand against Phillies fans filling the seats in this weekend's series

The Nationals

Look closely into the expanse of red. The differences might be subtle.

The ball caps, thousands of them, will be red, with a single white letter emblazoned on the front. As it should be in Nationals Park. But check the letter. Is it the hometown "Curly W"? Is it something else? Is that letter a "P"?

Competing fan promotions will collide Friday night, when Stephen Strasburg takes the mound in his first start since being named the National League's pitcher of the month in April. Is it a Philly Invasion or will Washington fans Take Back the Park?

Throughout their seven-year existence, the Nationals have endured helplessly the thousands of Phillies fans who have traveled south on I-95, organized by local radio stations or Internet message boards. The invaders have, almost without fail, outnumbered hometown fans.

And the visiting fans haven't always been exemplary guests, said Andy Feffer, the Nationals' chief operating officer, when asked if there had been some troubling incidents. "When have there not been?" he said. "Let's just say Phillies fans are notorious for their behavior."

Feffer has been the most vocal member of the organization, rallying Nats fans to strike back at the indignity. "Forget you, Philly," has been his mantra.

Fed up with the embarrassment and emboldened by a near-.500 finish last year, the organization this offseason announced a counteroffensive. In February, the club made single-game tickets available for this weekend's series — but only to fans in the immediate D.C. area.

Feffer declined to break down the ticket sales, but he said the campaign spurred the team's most successful presale, with a strong response from the local market.

APRIL 5, 2010, NATIONALS PARK: Philadelphia fans turned the Nats' stadium into a home away from home, leading to the Nationals' initiative to Take Back the Park during this weekend's series.

Feffer's Fury

The Nationals launched a "Take Back the Park" initiative designed to lock out Phillies fans. "Frankly, I'm tired of seeing the Phillies fans in our ballpark more than anything," Nats COO Andy Feffer said. "We sat down as a group and we said, 'You know what? It's time to take our park back in Washington and get our fans in this park.' ... This is our park, this is our town, these are our fans, and it's our time right now." (AP)

'Natitude Weekend'

D.C. Mayor Vincent Gray declared the upcoming weekend "Natitude Weekend," according to a tweet sent out by the club. Among other things, the proclamation says that this weekend, "all local residents show support of their hometown team," and that "Nationals players represent a 'Natitude' worthy of emulation," and that "every day the Nationals inspire our residents to 'Ignite Your Natitude.'" (TWP)

Attendance Struggles

22,675

The number of fans at the 41,000-seat Nationals Park on Tuesday for Bryce Harper's first game in Washington, which was a far cry from the sold-out bonanza of Stephen Strasburg's first game in June 2010.

► First season still the best: The Nats haven't seen a bigger turnout than in 2005, their debut year, when an average 33,728 fans were in attendance.

► Strasburg loses appeal: When Strasburg made his first home start of 2012, 16,245 came to see it — more than 5,000 fewer than had witnessed any of his previous home starts.

► Attendance up, advance sales down: The team's attendance appears down, Nats COO Andy Feffer said, but advance sales are up nearly 20 percent through the rest of the year, and the club expects attendance to rise. (TWP)

"We expect a large crowd of Washingtonians this weekend," he said.

The campaign angered Philly fans and even drew protest from Sen. Bob Casey, a Pennsylvania Democrat, who implored the Nationals to cease the promotion. Feffer politely declined.

The Nationals "should be happy anybody goes to their park," former Pennsylvania Governor Ed Rendell told the Wall Street Journal, calling the Nationals' ticket ploy "preposterous."

Even if Phillies fans still come in droves, there will be one stark difference this weekend. The Nationals will be ahead of the Phillies in the National League East standings. And not only will they have Strasburg on the mound Friday, but phenom Bryce Harper should be in the outfield for all three games — just in time for what would be his ESPN debut on Sunday night.

After besting first-place Philadelphia in the season series last year, the Nats' front office felt the timing was right for this weekend's campaign. "We had a lot of fans, media and players talking about all the Phillies fans that have come out to Nationals Park over the last few years for our games," Feffer said. "We felt very strongly at the end of last year that we needed to do something about it." DEREK TURNER (FOR EXPRESS)

Hidden Truths

The ad that's been turning Metro riders' heads recently is a billboard for the Kindle. To promote its e-reader, Amazon chose an image of the first few paragraphs of "Mockingjay," the final book in "The Hunger Games" trilogy, displayed on the device. What Amazon forgot is that folks who haven't gotten through the series yet can't easily avoid the huge type that reveals certain plot details — specifically, that [redacted] was [redacted], which made Katniss really [redacted].

But I don't care about spoiler alerts nearly as much as I do about MetroAlerts. The new service — which sends emails and texts to riders about disruptions, delays and detours, and lets them customize the info by selecting their line, frequently used stations and routes — seems to be good at getting the word out. (Within 12 hours of signing up, I got five notifications.)

WMATA is getting the word out about the service with a bunch of banners I recently spotted at Metro Center. They're slung low along the walls, which means more people were leaning against them than reading them. But when the butts moved out of the way, a few fascinating messages were revealed: "I took the bus to avoid those delays on the Red Line." "Delayed in rush hour or on-time happy hour?" "I adjusted my work schedule so that I could miss those train delays."

My eyes grew way wider than when I found out what happens in "The Hunger Games." Never before have I seen Metro advertising that's so brutally honest about what getting around by train and bus actually requires. You need to make backup plans, set realistic expectations and allow extra time in case things don't go exactly right. You need to do those things when you drive, too, but while people generally regard Beltway backups as a fact of life, a train offloading is viewed as one more reason to give up on transit altogether.

I tend to cut Metro more slack than most people, and I think that's because I've made an effort to stay informed and flexible. Sure, sometimes riding is a pain, but the more I know, the better my experience. Metro's use of its alert system to promote this mindset seems like a smart way to cut down on the constant kvetching directed at WMATA over the past few years.

Metro will never be perfect. But these ads might be — if people would just butt out of the way.

Woman Hit by Train at U Street Station

Transportation

A woman was struck by a Metro train at the U Street station on the Green/Yellow line around 2:10 p.m. Thursday, a transit agency official said.

Metro spokesman Dan Stessel said the woman appears to have intentionally placed herself in front of the train. Stessel had no reports on her condition.

In the past few years, Metro officials reported a surge in the number of suicides. In 2008, there were five; 10 in 2009; and last year, there were seven. The woman who was struck Thursday makes the sixth person so far this year to intentionally place herself in front of a train. Three of the six incidents this year have been fatal.

Metro had trained nearly 400 station managers and train operators in suicide-prevention as of April, Stessel said. DANA HEDGPETH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Ex-Councilmember Gets 39 Months for Corruption

Former D.C. Councilmember Harry Thomas Jr. was sentenced Thursday in federal court in Washington to three years and two months in prison for stealing more than $350,000 in government funds. Thomas pleaded guilty in January to embezzling hundreds of thousands of dollars earmarked for youth sports and arts programs. Thomas had been a long-time advocate for youth sports. (AP)

Pr. George's Exec Briber Gets 18 Months in Prison

Mirza H. Baig, the Laurel physician and developer who paid tens of thousands of dollars in bribes to then-Prince George's County Executive Jack B. Johnson, a Democrat, was sentenced Thursday to 18 months in prison. Baig's role late in 2010 when he was captured on an FBI video tape handing Johnson $15,000 in cash proved to be a key moment in the federal probe of corruption in Prince George's that led to the arrests of Johnson and his wife, Leslie Johnson. Poll: Obama Leads Romney in Va.

Voters are split about president's big issues, pessimistic on future

Washington

President Obama leads former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney in Virginia but commonwealth voters are evenly divided on the White House's major policies, a new Washington Post poll shows.

Obama is ahead of Romney, the presumed Republican nominee, 51 percent to 44 percent among registered voters. And Romney does no better against Obama than he did a year ago, despite his emergence Meanwhile...

Obama made early investments in Virginia and now has 13 offices open and dozens of paid staff. Virginia Republicans have seven field offices that will be used to boost Romney as well as other party candidates, and the Romney campaign announced Thursday that Sara Craig, his state director during the Iowa caucus, would run Romney's Virginia operations. (THE WASHINGTON POST) as the GOP standard-bearer.

Obama was the first Democrat to capture Virginia in four decades, and this week's schedule indicates his desire to repeat that performance. Obama will be in Arlington Friday to hold a roundtable and deliver remarks on student-loan debt. He will return to the commonwealth a day later in the guise of a candidate, holding a rally in Richmond meant to mark the official start of his re-election campaign.

The new poll shows Virginia voters are equally split on Obama's major initiatives, including his signature health care reform law, and remain deeply pessimistic about the way things are going in the country.

Romney has not been able to improve his statewide support from a poll a year ago even as his Republican opponents have fallen by the wayside. Yet he leads Obama by a huge margin among Republicans, just as Obama enjoys a massive lead among Democrats.

The poll was conducted by telephone April 28 to May 2, among a random sample of 1,101 Virginia adults. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Metro: $29,500 Spent to Stay Open Extra Hour

Washington

Metro added extra trains and stayed open an hour later Wednesday night at a cost of $29,500, to handle riders leaving the Capitals' hockey game that went into triple overtime.

Metro spokesman Dan Stessel said a portion of the $29,500-an-hour cost will be billed to the Caps and repaid to Metro. The rest is revenue Metro made from riders who used the service during that hour.

Stessel said the Caps had an agreement with Metro that involved the transit agency staying open later if needed during the playoff season. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Minutes To Remember

For the Rangers, Game 3 marked the fifth-longest game in franchise history, with those ahead all coming in the 1930s. It was New York's longest game since March 21, 1939, when they lost, 2-1, to Boston after 119:25 minutes of play. It was also the first time the Rangers had been to triple OT since 1971.

(THE WASHINGTON POST)

The New York Rangers celebrate after beating the Capitals in triple overtime on Wednesday. The teams play Game 4 of the series on Saturday.

In for the Long Haul

Caps hope their depth helps them rebound from triple-OT defeat

The Capitals

The blood stains and cuts on the faces of various Capitals and New York Rangers said everything you needed to know about Wednesday night's three-overtime epic.

In what became the Capitals' third-longest game in franchise history with a running time of 114 minutes, 41 seconds, the Rangers survived Washington's assaults and took a two games to one series lead with a goal from Marian Gaborik to win the contest, 2-1.

While the Rangers won the longest playoff game of this postseason thus far, at what price did the victory come?

"You invest a lot every night, no matter what. If it's a 60-minute game or extended into overtime," Matt Hendricks said. "When you extend into overtime you are investing more and more and you are putting everything you've got into it."

While both teams' players and coaches cited that they each had to endure the rigors of the same game, the Capitals may have a slight advantage coming into Saturday afternoon's Game 4.

In a must-win game at home to prevent the series to sliding to 3-1 in New York's favor, the Capitals — in a way — could be more rested than their opponents.

As the overtime periods dragged on, Caps coach Dale Hunter made use of his entire lineup — particularly all six defensemen on his roster — while Rangers coach John Tortorella drastically shortened his bench.

For the Capitals, 13 players had more than 30 minutes of ice time and defenseman Dennis Wideman skated a team-high 40:42. But only nine Rangers skated more than 30 minutes.

New York defenseman Ryan McDonagh recorded a mammoth 53:17 of ice time, illustrating Tortorella's immense shortening of the bench.

Whether or not this will provide an advantage for the Capitals remains to be seen, and Tortorella reasons that the playoffs are as much a mental game as they are a physical one.

"When you get into that many hours of playing it becomes a mental game," he said. "I felt as the game got longer and longer, I felt that our team was at an advantage. I think we have a mentally tough group."

An extra day of rest before Saturday's game should help alleviate any fatigue issues the Rangers might face, but Hunter isn't sold that New York's massive ice time discrepancy between the top players and midtier players will make much of an impact.

"Both teams went through [the overtime game]. So we're in the same boat," Hunter said. "It's just another game then. You [have to] go to the next game."

REED S. ALBERS (FOR EXPRESS)

Epic Battles

Wednesday's game was the third-longest playoff contest in Caps' franchise history. Here are the four longest:

40T April 24, 1996:

Game 4, Eastern Conference quarterfinals against Pittsburgh. Petr Nedved scored the game winner with just 44.6 seconds remaining in the fourth overtime for a 3-2 Penguins win.

40T April 18, 1987:

Game 7, Patrick Division semifinals against the New York Islanders. Pat LaFontaine scored the series winner 8:47 into the fourth overtime for a 3-2 Islanders win.

30T May 2, 2012:

Game 3, Eastern Conference semifinals against the New York Rangers. Marian Gaborik's shot from out in front came at 14:41 in the third overtime to give New York a 2-1 win.

30T April 20, 2003:

Game 6, Eastern Conference quarterfinals against Tampa Bay. Martin St. Louis scored 4:03 into the third overtime to give the Lightning a 2-1 win. (TWP)

Seau's Death Confirmed as a Suicide

Family must decide whether to donate his brain for research

Pro Football

Junior Seau's death has been ruled a suicide by the San Diego County medical examiner's office.

An autopsy Thursday confirmed that the former NFL linebacker died of a gunshot wound to the chest, the medical examiner's office said.

Officials said they were awaiting a decision by the family on whether to turn over Seau's brain to unidentified outside researchers for study. Seau died Wednesday in his home in suburban Oceanside, Calif.

Police Chief Frank McCoy said Seau's girlfriend reported finding him unconscious with a gunshot wound to the chest and lifesaving efforts were unsuccessful.

A gun was found near him, McCoy said. Police said no suicide note was found and they didn't immediately know who the gun was registered to.

GETTY IMAGES

Disturbing Trend

Junior Seau's death follows the suicide last year of former Chicago Bears player Dave Duerson, who also shot himself in the chest. Duerson's family has filed a wrongful death suit against the NFL, claiming the league didn't do enough to prevent or treat concussions that severely damaged Duerson's brain before he died in February 2011. Junior Seau is not known to have had a concussion but Boston University has asked to study his brain for damage. (AP)

100+

More than 100 former NFL players have filed a federal lawsuit in Atlanta claiming that pro football didn't properly protect its players from concussions. The plaintiffs in the lawsuit include former Atlanta Falcon Jamal Anderson, ex-Georgia star Lindsey Scott and veteran quarterback Don Majkowski. The lawsuit, filed Thursday in federal court in Georgia, claims the league failed to protect NFL players from brain injuries linked to football-related concussions. (AP)

Seau's ex-wife, Gina, told the Associated Press on Wednesday that Seau sustained concussions during his 20-year career. She said she didn't know if the effects of concussions contributed to Seau's death.

Seau starred with his hometown San Diego Chargers for 13 years before playing with the Miami Dolphins and New England Patriots.

Seau's death in Oceanside, in northern San Diego County, stunned the region he represented with almost reckless abandon. The same intensity that got the star linebacker ejected for fighting in his first exhibition game helped carry the Chargers to their only Super Bowl, following the 1994 season. A ferocious tackler, he'd leap up, pump a fist and kick out a leg after dropping a ball carrier or quarterback.

"It's a sad thing. It's hard to understand," said Bobby Beathard, who as Chargers general manager took Seau out of Southern California with the fifth pick overall in the 1990 draft. "He was really just a great guy. If you drew up a player you'd love to have the opportunity to draft and have on the team and as a teammate, Junior and Rodney [Harrison], they'd be the kind of guys you'd like to have."

Quarterback Stan Humphries recalled that Seau did everything at the same speed, whether it was practicing, lifting weights or harassing John Elway.

"The intensity, the smile, the infectious attitude, it carried over to all the other guys," said Humphries, who was shocked that Seau is now the eighth player from the '94 Super Bowl team to die. (AP)

Trainer Hopes to Run Union Rags to Riches

Horse Racing

The life-sized statue sits at the front gate of Churchill Downs, a magnificent bronzed Barbaro in full stride, all four hooves off the ground and heading toward his greatest victory.

Muscular and athletic, its presence provokes quiet reflection of the 2006 Kentucky Derby winner at the peak of his power and of his death, eight months later, following a horrific injury. Some leave red roses, others snap photos.

Trainer Michael Matz is hoping another 3-year-old colt, Union Rags, can fill the hole in his barn and in his soul.

He sees the same promising signs from Union Rags, who is using the same stall as Barbaro and is the early second choice for Saturday's 138th Kentucky Derby.

"They're both big, good-looking, fast and athletic. Union Rags still has to live up to what Barbaro did," Matz said.

He has never been one to let tragedy or setbacks slow him down. In 1989, he and his future wife, D.D. Alexander, were passengers on a United Airlines flight that crash-landed in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 111 people on board. The couple survived, and Matz heroically plucked four children — three siblings and an 11-month-old baby — from the wreckage.

Union Rags is an early 9-2 favorite to win the Kentucky Derby on Saturday.

Matz and his wife at the 2006 Derby to watch Barbaro become the sixth undefeated horse to win. The good feelings were dashed two weeks later with Barbaro's stunning breakdown that had fans crying in the stands at the Preakness.

Now Matz has moved on again, training Union Rags — an early 9-2 second choice for Saturday's race — for Phyllis Wyeth, the 71-year-old former steeplechase rider and aide to President John F. Kennedy. She is married to Jamie Wyeth, the famed painter and son of artist Andrew Wyeth.

"I guess when he moved on from the Jacksons and Barbaro, all of a sudden Union Rags won his first start," Jamie Wyeth said. "It's kind of interesting how that seems to be in the air. He just moves right on to another thing. He's such a wonderful person." BETH HARRIS (AP)

INJURIES

Big Loss

Ravens linebacker Terrell Suggs may have surgery as soon as next week for a partially torn Achilles tendon, which he says will not keep him out for the entire 2012 season. Suggs has played nine seasons for Baltimore and has missed only three games, and the injury is a major blow to a stout Ravens defense. (AP)

The Future Is Now For the Nationals

I've seen the future of the Nationals and his name is Bryce Harper.

Sure, teammate Stephen Strasburg might already be the best pitcher in baseball. But Harper plays every day. And by plays, I mean he does something notable.

By Matt Swenson

His arm is so good that two umpires have been caught noticeably off-guard on plays at home plate since his major league debut last Saturday. Harper has made spectacular plays with his glove and bare hand in the outfield. And if Harper's batting practice performances aren't enough for you, just look at his at-bats when it counts.

I can't remember a player running hard down the line on a routine

Strasburg will keep piling up the wins, but this is going to be Harper's town.

grounder being more excited than Harper hustling even the most mundane plays out.

Clearly, the phenom is just that. He was born to be a big-leaguer, and clearly he relishes it.

His out-of-this-ballpark personality meshes perfectly with Strasburg's shy nature. Strasburg will keep piling up the wins, but this is going to be Harper's town — at least during new Redskins quarterback Robert Griffin III's offseason.

It's no surprise Harper has the skills to be a star. That's been a given since he was 16 years old.

What's shocking is that Harper doesn't seem fazed by his sudden ascension to the majors. Rather than being overcome by the spotlight, he's thriving. Forget the minors. Harper is here to stay.

Bryce Harper has been a hit with the media and with his teammates since being called up to the major leagues last Saturday.

Harper Is 'Infectious'

Teen quickly earns promotion in lineup with energetic style

The Nationals

Well, that was quick: Teenager Bryce Harper already is hitting third for the Nationals.

Washington manager Davey Johnson moved Harper into the No. 3 spot in the batting order for Washington's game Thursday night against the Arizona Diamondbacks and pitcher Ian Kennedy.

It's only the fifth major league game for the 19-year-old Harper, an outfielder who's been hitting seventh since being called up from Triple-A Syracuse on Saturday. He took the roster spot vacated by usual No. 3 hitter Ryan Zimmerman, who went on the DL.

Harper was the No. 1 overall pick in the 2010 amateur draft after finishing high school early, then spending one season as a catcher at a junior college. He entered Thursday with a .385 average, three doubles and two RBI.

Enough, it seems, can't be said about the energy Harper has injected into this team and, particularly, its lineup.

"Here's a 19-year-old kid that's getting the bat out," Johnson said. "It's infectious. It hurts you a little bit missing your three- and four-hole hitters, because when they start doing it, it kind of flows. But seeing a 19-year-old hitting seventh come along and have nothing but quality at-bats, that's impressive."

It's one thing to be the best player at almost every level, as Harper has been his entire life. But it's another to be a major leaguer at such a young age, hoping not to irk established teammates with too much pizzazz. But, in a sense, there's no better way to endear yourself with teammates than by producing on the field.

"It's not necessarily needing to see him do it in the big leagues," reliever Craig Stammen said after Wednesday's 5-4 win over the Diamondbacks. "It's just we haven't been able to watch him play a full game. That's when you tell what a player's made of. And I think he showed in the situations he was put in tonight, the stage isn't too big for him."

Although it's a small sample size, Harper has proven it was the right time to call him up.

"He has great confidence in his abilities and is not afraid to show it on the big stage," Nationals general manager Mike Rizzo said Tuesday. "His makeup is, the brighter the lights, the better he plays."

One Extreme to Another for D.C.

Major League Soccer

D.C. United's week has been marked by extremes. After reaching the high of topping 2011 MLS Cup finalist Houston last weekend, United fell to the Western Conference-leading San Jose Earthquakes 5-3 Wednesday night. Now it's off to the other end of the spectrum, as D.C. travels north of the border to face winless Toronto FC in a Saturday matinee (4 p.m., CSN+).

United's depleted depth came into play in its wild loss to the Earthquakes, and with little time to dwell on the result, D.C. will likely be shorthanded in Toronto. With Emiliano Dudar (hamstring), Dejan Jakovic (ankle) and Ethan White

Ugly Numbers

Toronto FC, D.C. United's next opponent, has matched the worst start in MLS history. Here's a look at the futility by the numbers:

- 0-7-0 The club's record, tied for the worst start in MLS history with the 1999 Kansas City Wizards
- 16 Goals allowed, the most in MLS
- 0 Amount of games in which all three of the club's Designated Players (Torsten Frings, Danny Koevermans, Julian de Guzman) have played together this season
- 3 Goals scored by Dwayne De Rosario in his one game last year vs. Toronto, one of his former teams. A.C.

(knee) unavailable, Perry Kitchen slotted back from midfield to play center back on Wednesday. At one point, winger Andy Najar entered as a makeshift right back, giving Robbie Russell a crack at center back while Kitchen moved up to his usual position. While the moves had didn't hurt the offense, the hap-hazard defending made things way too easy for San Jose to score. United coach Ben Olsen is wary of letting that happen again.

"We have to survive. There are a lot of teams with players in key positions out. We just have to make it work," Olsen said after the loss in San Jose, which snapped D.C.'s seven-game unbeaten streak.

ready to rent

When Anna Smith, 29, had trouble finding the perfect apartment in D.C., she negotiated with her landlord to find a place she loved that was in her price range.

Don't Be Afraid to Negotiate

Persuading a landlord to sweeten a rental deal isn't as hard as you think

Apartment-Hunting

When Anna Smith, 29, moved from Los Angeles to D.C., she and her boyfriend had a typical Washington-area real estate experience: First, they looked at a dingy basement apartment without a kitchen, then they saw a bedbug-infested place downtown. And then, there was a sunny studio in Columbia Heights.

"Hardwood floors, a closet that could be a reading nook, it had everything," Smith says. "I loved it right away."

The problem? Smith and her boyfriend's salaries did not meet the minimum income requirement for the place. Instead of giving up, Smith asked the rental office if anything could be done.

"They found me a cheaper studio with the same things I loved about the old place," says Smith, who moved there in April. It was, however, on the ground floor, which meant the rent was lower.

Negotiating with landlords was a trick Smith had learned at the sublet she'd been staying in — she was living in a one-bedroom but paying for a studio, thanks to a deal she worked out with the landlord.

Anyone who has tried to rent in or around Washington, D.C. knows that lessees usually don't have the upper hand. In 2011, only 15 percent of building managers said they were willing to lower rent for a tenant, down from 69 percent in 2009, according to Rent.com. But agile negotiators can still get themselves some perks — the key is communication.

“It never hurts to ask,” said Chris Swanson, a co-owner of Evolve Property Management, which rents properties across the city. Swanson said he’s worked with new tenants to paint a wall the color they want for free before move-in. Other times, he’s found potential tenants a place in the same building with such perks as wood floors or more light but charged them the same price as a less-desirable unit.

Prospective tenants often have more luck getting fees waived than out-and-out asking for a rent reduction, says Amy Rose Dobson, an editor at the real estate website CurbedDC.

Ask if parking rates can be lowered, or activities fees can be cut. If you’re strapped for cash during a move, some landlords allow renters to pay their security deposit once they get their money back from an old apartment, Dobson said.

Not all negotiations are equally fruitful. “Real estate is hyper-local,” Christina Aragon, director of strategy and consumer insights at Rent.com, Prospective tenants may have better luck negotiating for waived fees, lowered parking rates or a flexible move-in date than getting a reduction in their monthly rent.

“Real estate is hyper-local. You really need to understand the market dynamics in the particular neighborhoods.”

— CHRISTINA ARAGON, RENT.COM’S DIRECTOR OF STRATEGY AND CONSUMER INSIGHTS, ADVISES RENTERS TO COMPARE SIMILAR APARTMENTS IN THE SAME AREA.

said by email. “You really need to understand the market dynamics in the particular neighborhoods where you are interested in living to negotiate successfully.”

Aragon recommends gathering information about what similar apartments in a neighborhood are renting for, and noting whether the apartment you want has fewer amenities than a similarly priced unit in the same building.

She also advises tenants to stay flexible. Landlords are often trying to offload a particular type of property — they could be having trouble renting out one bedrooms or apartments without many windows. If you take that off their hands, building managers may be more willing to lower their price.

Another option is offering to sign a longer lease if you’re confident you want to stay in the place more than a year. It offers the landlord more security, so he or she may be willing to concede on other things.

Christopher Parnes, a lawyer at Wilmer Hale and former intern at the Landlord and Tenant Resource Center at Georgetown University’s Law Center (Dcbar.org), has helped solve dozens of landlord issues. He says the best time to negotiate is when you’re re-signing a lease.

At that point, the landlord has a relationship with his or her tenant, and finding a new tenant would take time and effort. If you want lower rent, free parking or a better deal on utilities, this is the time to negotiate it.

As Parnes puts it, that’s when “a tenant has all the bargaining power.”

This 450-sq. ft. studio is probably one of the cheapest in Northwest. A gigantic window lets in plenty of light, along with views of Rock Creek Park; two closets provide ample storage space. But there are quirks -- visitors enter through a cramped kitchen and walk through a closet to reach the bathroom. Residents have access to a pool and fitness center. The building itself, a former hotel, is sprawling, but the lobby could use an update. All utilities are included in the rent. (LISTED BY THE WOODNER COMPANY)

MATT CARRIGETTY IMAGES

Sissy Spacek

ACTRESS, MOM, AUTHOR, VIRGINIAN

Oscar-winner Sissy Spacek effortlessly slips into parts as varied as a psycho high-schooler ("Carrie"), country singer Loretta Lynn ("Coal Miner's Daughter") and a mother of a troubled boxer in crime drama "Deadfall," which opened at the Tribeca Film Festival last month. But it's her role as a mother to two daughters that spurred her to write a memoir, "My Extraordinary Ordinary Life" ($27, Hyperion). The Blue Ridge Mountains resident will be at Sixth & I Historic Synagogue (Sixthandi.org) on May 6 at 3 p.m.

Your memoir is so detailed. How did you decide what to include?

I'm from a family of storytellers, and so I was happiest to get my childhood stories down and stories of my grandparents for my girls. Our childhoods are the foundations of our life. I wanted to put all that down while I still remember so vividly.

What will fans be most surprised to learn about you?

Maybe that I'm just like them.

Looking forward, what would the next chapter look like?

I'd hope that I would be just continuing to live my life, making movies and enjoying my children, my husband and my animals.

You were 6 years old when a show of baton twirlers inspired you to go into show business. What did you want to do?

It was just the excitement of the theater. I remember looking at my little girlfriends up on stage twirling their batons and thinking, "I could do that. I should be up there." The irony is that I did learn to twirl a baton, and then that became an important part of one of my first characters, Holly from "Badlands." Who knew that that was a talent I would use years later?

"[Virginia's] the greatest place in the world. You just have to stay off the tarmac and find a shade tree."

Do you have a favorite role?

Yes, of course — "Badlands" and "Carrie" and "Coal Miner's Daughter," "The Help," "Raggedy Man," "Missing." There are more than that as well. The film I did with [director] Bob Altman, "3 Women," and "The Straight Story" with [director] David Lynch. It's kind of like your children. You love them all. You love the same but differently.

You're a Texas native who's lived in California and New York. How did you come to live in Virginia?

My husband grew up in Virginia and he brought me here. I remember stepping out of the plane many years ago in Washington, D.C. I think it was in August. We came from California and the heat and humidity hit me as I walked off the plane, and I thought, "Why would anyone live here?"

But you stayed?

Yes, years later, here I am and it's the greatest place in the world. You just have to stay off the tarmac and find a shade tree. It's really a lovely place because the land is so beautiful. The topography, the history and the people are so lovely.

STEPHANIE KANOWITZ (FOR EXPRESS)

Event Horizon | A More Stylish Alternative to Margaritas

Spend your Cinco de Mayo with the ladies of Ginger Root Design, the indie tailors and red-headed gals with a flair for finding local gems (1530 U St. NW; 202-567-7668). Their trunk show from 3-7 p.m. this Saturday highlights four District designers, including hat-maker Ciao Nina and jewelry designers Lauren Joan, Clara Cantor and YB Green.

1 Ole School

SOUTH OF THE BORDER DESIGN isn't all piñatas and woven blankets. The MoMa Store's just-launched collaboration, Destination Mexico (Momastore.org), spotlights modern home and personal goods from our neighbors below, like a cheeky Sombrero Dish (shown, $68), bowls made of fiesta-bright paper strips ($25) and flower brooches crafted from charomesa, the ubiquitous oilcloth table covers used in homes and restaurants throughout Mexico ($15). Any would spice up a Cinco de Mayo bash.

Grab Bag

2 Shop! That! Bus!

SOMEONE NEEDS to explain the definition of "trunk show" to Joey Wolffer. The fab globetrotter seems to have taken it literally. The Styleliner, her 20-foot potato-chip truck turned accessories-shop-on-wheels, is a mobile marvel where she sells spoils from her worldly travels, such as mesh jewelry from Spain, beaded clutches from Brazil and Parisian endless scarves. She hits the road in D.C. this weekend in Georgetown and Dupont. Find dates and times at Thestyleliner.com.

3 Yes We Tan

YOU CAN ALWAYS TELL who's been spray-tanning by their carroty complexion and that funky cocoa-butter smell. Lucky for hue, St. Tropez's Perfect Legs Spray ($18, Sttropheztan.com) combats all the tell-tale signs of fakery. The sugar-based formula leaves gams beautifully bronzed for up to 10 days and is developed with Aromaguard, technology that eliminates 70 percent of typical tanner odor.

4 Maxx Season

SINCE 1977, T.J. MAXX HAS BEEN outfitting penny-pinching shoppers with the same clothing, shoes and accessories available at fancy department stores for up to 60 percent off. The latest addition to its fleet — store No. 1,000 — recently opened in downtown D.C. (601 13th St. NW; 202-637-1261) and houses the usual suspects like Michael Kors and Nine West, plus a Runway at Maxx section full of couture designs from contemporary American and European designers.

5 Shade Of Gray

THE CUPPED HAND: very effective against rays, but not particularly fashion-forward. Enter Waiting for the Sun, eyewear outfitters based in Paris (Redeem, 1734 14th St. NW; 202-332-7447). The 100 percent UV protective spectacles are hand-carved from wood, including the Delta Natural (top, $185), the Deux Cognac (middle, $185) and the Solid Green (bottom, $185).

Dear Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

For Mother's Day, I'm planning a brunch in my backyard for Mom and some family. I need flats to go with the simple sundress I'll be wearing under my apron. No thongs, please, as the shoes need to stay on my feet as I go back and forth to the kitchen.

— MELINDA

Manolo says, Ayyyyy! The Dia De La Madre is only one week away! What are you going to do to honor that most special lady in your life, the mother? Will you settle for the traditional brunchon of the Artichoke Crab Legs Benedict at the Lobster of Redness?

Or will you attempt something more ambitious, such as doing the special celebratory meal with the family on your recently completed patio?

On the one hand, all-you-can-eat cheese biscuits.

On the other hand, have you made the hollandaise sauce from the scratch recently? And do you have the number for poison control taped to the refrigerator?

Whatever the case, nothing says "I Love You, Mom," quite like the Sunday brunch, unless it is for the giant, lace-bedecked greeting card with the endearingly floral scene on the outside and the finest rhyming doggerel about the long-suffering nobility of motherhood on the inside.

Here is the Maia Lush from Bernardo, the cute flat sandal in the dove color, with the intriguing hook-and-eye details on the strap.

Mom would be proud of such a practical choice.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

STEP AWAY FROM THE JEANS. Though versatile, denim does very little in the wow department. Pants with loud florals, happy polka dots and pretty paisleys, on the other hand, scream "Let's have some fun!" "We have a tendency to get in a rut wearing the same solid pants and just interchanging the top," says Violet Boutique owner Julie Egermayer. "But wearing patterned bottoms is an easy way to add some pop to your wardrobe. They're no longer a fashion risk — they're a fashion staple." We've rounded up our favorite patterned pants to prove that this season, prints are king.

The ReelistAll-Out 'Avengers'

I never really believed the story about how late-19th-century audiences, when they saw "The Arrival of a Train at La Ciotat Station," ran from the screen, afraid the cinematic choo-choo would squish them. (If you're not familiar with the 50-second film, here's the plot: A train pulls into a station. People get on. People get off. The end.)

If any of the ghosts of those early filmgoers were at my screening of

By Kristen
Page-Kirby

"The Avengers," they were probably laughing at me, the silly woman desperately clutching the armrests and ducking while a battle between aliens and superheroes raged. The 3-D and IMAX technology tapped into the reptile part of my brain, and that part was screaming "IT'S THE HULK! RUN!"

Sometimes it's not worth paying extra for 3-D and IMAX, particularly since the name "IMAX" now means almost nothing. (The reasons why are for another column. A boring, nerdy column.) But when you see "The Avengers," go to the best theater you can find. Pay for the 3-D. Pay for the IMAX. Pee beforehand, and don't get a drink. It would be a shame to miss any part of this film, a marvel that takes technology that, until recently, has been superfluous at best and distracting at worst and makes it integral to the experience.

Drive a little farther, pay a little more, and take this ride in the best possible circumstances.

Film Review

There were ripples of anticipation — and anxiety — when Marvel announced that Joss Whedon would direct "Marvel's The Avengers," the comic-book-movie to end all comic book movies, featuring Iron Man, Captain America, the Hulk, Black Widow, Hawkeye and Thor.

Whedon is known for his cerebral humor — most recently in the slasher send-up "The Cabin in the Woods." He also has an unrepentant sentimental streak, evidenced by his work on the first "Toy Story" movie. When it came to Whedon having his way with the rabidly beloved Marvel franchise, fanboys wondered (to borrow a phrase from the movie itself): What's his play?

Those faithful acolytes can breathe easy: "The Avengers" has been executed with all the reverence the superfans demand, as well as the winking, self-referential humor that has made it palatable for filmgoers disinclined to take a bunch of men dressed in spandex so seriously.

Most crucially, Whedon has enlisted terrific actors

Support Staff

Though the main Avengers get all the attention, the S.H.I.E.L.D. agents — Samuel L. Jackson's Nick Fury, Clark Gregg's Phil Coulson and Cobie Smulders' Maria Hill — also supply serious firepower.

who function both as individual stars and a cohesive team. That balancing act is precisely what's called for in "The Avengers," which pivots largely on the tensions between superheroes accustomed to being singular, now forced to work in harness with one another's often ungovernable strengths — and egos.

When Robert Downey Jr. first played Tony Stark in "Iron Man," he brought a bracing dose of sophistication and flip-pant humor to what could have been a turgid exercise in overseriousness. In "Iron Man 2," he took the cockiness to a new, not altogether welcome, level of self-regard. In "The Avengers," he dials the swagger back to where viewers first fell for Stark, the smart-but-silly playboy whose superpower may reside in a metal sheath but also lies in his ability to puncture the most cherished pieties.

That impudence doesn't sit well with Steve Rogers, aka Captain America, whom Chris Evans introduced last year as a refreshingly clean-cut avatar of retro wholesomeness and values. Befud-

ROBERT DOWNEY JR., IRON MAN:

"... The 'Iron Man' series so far has always been about making space for others and collaborating.

It's Tony's ... story, but it's always about all the folks we get around him who are kind of what make him interesting or give him someone or something to fight."

Behind The Scenes
with 'The Avengers'

CHRIS EVANS, CAPTAIN AMERICA:

"I'd never seen either one of them before in their outfits. Obviously I loved the 'Iron Man' movies and I had just seen 'Thor' ... and I remember coming to set and seeing both of them suited up and just thinking ... 'God, I wish I could work with those guys.' And the immediate afterthought was, '[Expletive] I am! I am! I'm in a suit too! I can't believe this!' So that was a really nice geek moment for me."

HAWKEYE

The Funny Side of Super Heroes

dled by Stark's snark — and references to 21st-century ephemera — he now looks more like a moralizing prig.

The competitive psychodynamics between Stark and Rogers play out after they're assembled by Nick Fury (Samuel L. Jackson) and the peacekeeping agency S.H.I.E.L.D., when Thor's (Chris Hemsworth) brother Loki (Tom Hiddleston) arrives on Earth and wreaks chaotic havoc. If Stark doesn't immediately bond with Captain America, he finds a more easy alliance with the brainy Bruce Banner (Mark Ruffalo), the mellow, modest scientist who, to avoid getting angry and turning into the Hulk, has been living abroad.

Another newcomer, Jeremy Renner, doesn't get as much screen time as Ruffalo. But as Hawkeye — whose backstory with Scarlett Johansson's Black Widow forms another fractious subplot — he proves that he's capable of holding his own within a franchise juggernaut.

Laying waste to midtown Manhattan while tickling the dark side of his dualistic protagonists, Whedon has positioned "The Avengers" exactly where it needs to be in order to keep spinning out. Bidding good-bye to at least one character and saying hello to another in a tantalizing closing-credits hint, he leaves us wanting more — which, for now at least, is undoubtedly the right play.

ANN HORANADY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

$280

The gross of "The Avengers" worldwide, as of Thursday. Last week, the film opened abroad.

SCARLETT JOHANSSON, BLACK WIDOW:

"One of the biggest challenges was learning the Wushu style of fighting, which is really intense and complicated and painful. You do all your rehearsals with a broom handle, and suddenly you have a 30-lb. alien gun in your hand."

MARK RUFFALO, THE HULK:

"It's creepy, I have to say. It's exactly what we wanted it to be like. Even my chest hair, the gray in my hair. Wow. It's pretty amazing, but it's a little shocking."

Joss Whedon injects some welcome humor into 'The Avengers'

Personalities

You better know how to wisecrack if you're going to save the world, Joss Whedon-style.

Whedon, creator of "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and other witty TV ensembles such as "Firefly" and "Dollhouse," applies his own superpower — playful dialogue and group camaraderie — as writer and director of the superhero mash-up "The Avengers."

As with "Buffy" or Whedon's other fantasy-based creations, the gags make the action go down more credibly as the Avengers battle Thor's wicked brother and a swarm of ugly aliens.

"I never write anything without humor, just because I like humor, but at the same time, it is a way for anything fantastical to become relatable," Whedon says. "Because you can always turn around and go, 'That guy's the god

Team Bonding

Much of the humor in Joss Whedon's "The Avengers" derives from the growing pains the Avengers experience, squabbling among one another before they learn to work as a team. (AP) of thunder, and this is really happening!' And then if anybody in the audience was having a problem with that, they're sort of inoculated to it."

"The Avengers" were among the first comic books Whedon read as a boy. The influence of the ensemble and its complicated, crazy interrelations is obvious through much of Whedon's work.

"The great thing about this team is, there's an element of absurdity to the idea of the Avengers, and there always was," he says. "You read the first issue, and you're like, 'Really? REALLY? This is a team?'" DAVID GERMAIN (AP)

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel (PG-13)

► Director: John Madden

► Stars: Judi Dench, Billy Nighy, Maggie Smith, Dev Patel

► In a Nutshell: This blandly middling crowd-pleaser follows a group of seven English retirees who have taken up residence in a seedy Indian boarding house. The entertainment one derives from it is directly proportional to the appeal of each character. Those levels vary widely. At the delightful end of the spectrum is Judi Dench's Evelyn, a recent widow whose loneliness and wisdom is rendered in an affectingly nuanced performance. At the other end is Maggie Smith's Muriel, a racist coot rendered in a strident, one-note caricature. Some viewers may respond to the film's message that it's never too late for love. Others may groan at its reliance on paleolithic vaudeville humor. MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Restless City (R)

In this narratively unsteady but visually rhapsodic debut, New York is again portrayed as the place where dreams come true. But Nigeria-born director Andrew Dosunmu infuses that familiar narrative with the uncertainty of displacement and the verve of discovery. Sy Alassane stars as an immigrant from Senegal who longs to make it as a pop star. When he meets a beautiful prostitute, the shadow world they inhabit takes on dangerous implications. ALAN MARKFELD/WARNER BROS.

"The Lucky One," starring Zac Efron, left, and Taylor Schilling, right, tries to be the next "The Notebook," but in this case, the sparks don't fly in quite the same way.

Now Playing

AMERICAN REUNION (R, 113 minutes)

Like Stifler, "American Reunion" refuses to grow up. The obsession with sex has not changed. The subject of coupling, uncoupling and re-coupling with exes is almost the sole subject of conversation at this reunion. There's precious little comedy mined from the fact that people change. It pushes R-rated movie boundaries: If you've ever wondered what a nude Jason Biggs looks like smooshed up against glass, your prayers will be answered. At times it goes beyond tweaking taboos to the downright inappropriate. A subplot about a neighborhood girl (Ali Cobrin) — she's turning 18 and has the hots for Jim, her former babysitter — borders on the pedophilic. M.O.

THE CABIN IN THE WOODS (R, 95 minutes)

Like its spiritual heirs, "The Cabin in the Woods" comes not only to praise the slasher-, zombie- and gore-fests of yore but to critique them, elaborating on their grammatical elements and archetypal figures even while searching for ways to put them to novel use. The opening scenes are when viewers meet the principal players, who hew telegraphically to horror-movie conventions. When they all pile into an RV and head for one of their cousin's new place on a rural lake, carnage is sure to ensue; when they encounter a spooky old coot at an abandoned gas station on their way, their tragic fates are all but sealed. As a playful departure from the torture porn that it obliquely lampoons, "The Cabin in the Woods" marks a welcome return of cheap thrills and simple bump-in-the-night frights, with some stinging self-critical commentary on the side. A.H.

THE FIVE-YEAR ENGAGEMENT (R, 124 minutes) A running sight gag has Jason Segel dressed in a pink bunny suit, which his character, Tom, wore to the New Year's Eve party where he met Violet (Emily Blunt). She's dressed as Princess Di, and it's no wonder that the two hit it off. One year later, Tom proposes to Violet in one of the cutest marry-me sequences staged in recent movie history. The film hits a speed bump right when Tom and Violet do, after they move to Michigan. Tom can't find a job and winds up making sandwiches; Violet comes under the sway of a flashy psych professor, and the two begin to grow apart. Because it's so willing to drill down into Tom's and Violet's misery, "The Five-Year Engagement" involves a higher grim-to-grin ratio than its fluffier brethren. There's an unmistakable ring of truth to the couple's conflicts and mixed feelings. Even at its darkest and weirdest, "The Five-Year Engagement" seems intent on being as sweet as it is brutally honest. A.H.

THE HUNGER GAMES (PG-13, 142 minutes) This adaptation of the hit young adult novel centers on grievous violence and children, who, in author Suzanne Collins' floridly postapocalyptic future, are subjected to an annual ritual wherein they murder one another as part of a nationwide reality show. That perverse dystopia is brought faithfully, if unspectacularly, to life by director Gary Ross. If the series'

entertainment lookout

legions of fans miss a detail here or a subplot there, they'll still recognize its bones and sinew, especially in Jennifer Lawrence's eagle-eyed heroine, Katniss Everdeen. The Hunger Games have been instituted by the elite leaders of a country in order to keep down a restive populace. After randomly plucking a boy and a girl from each of the federation's districts, a shadowy government-entertainment complex subjects them to a kill-or-be-killed group hunt. Lawrence is never less than grounded and believable as a young woman forced by circumstance to assume wisdom far beyond her years. A.H.

THE LUCKY ONE (PG-13, 101 minutes) Can a drama be too restrained? "The Lucky One," adapted from a Nicholas Sparks novel, stars Zac Efron in a sudsy romantic melodrama. All great romances hinge on two things: keeping the principals apart and getting them together. When a conclusion is as foregone as the one in "The Lucky One," the first part of the equation becomes nothing but contrivance and ginned-up conflict. Most of "The Lucky One" consists of proving how sensitive Logan (Efron) is and how put-upon Beth (Taylor Schilling) is as she clatters around her grandmother's impeccably distressed cottage and affects Veronica Lake-esque bangs-in-the-eye sultriness. A.H.

THE PIRATES! BAND OF MISFITS (PG, 90 minutes) The charmingly goofy animated feature showcases characters known only as the Pirate Captain, the Pirate With Gout, the Albino Pirate, etc. "The Pirates!" is built around the premise of a reality-TV-style contest between the Pirate Captain and three other blackguards: Black Belamy, Cutlass Liz and Peg Leg Hastings. In his search for ships filled with booty, the Pirate Captain accidentally sacks the HMS Beagle, the research ship of Charles Darwin (voiced by David Tennant), leading to a more landlocked, and delightfully ludicrous, adventure. Like many Aardman Animations films, this one is awash with silliness. It has enough humor to keep Mom and Dad from falling asleep. As with Aardman's "Wallace and Gromit" films, there's a sardonic animal sidekick. Perhaps, by the second "Pirates!" film, there will be a character as beloved as Gromit. In the meantime, "The Pirates!" has made a buoyant maiden voyage. M.O.

THE RAVEN (R, 111 minutes) See the right promotional photo of John Cusack playing Edgar Allan Poe in "The Raven" and it briefly looks like a good idea, but then Edgar Allan Poe walks into a bar and starts talking. Nothing in the actor's cadence or attitude suggests the story's 1849 setting. "The Raven" seems content to steal a famous figure's name and leave any stabs at authenticity to the set and costume designers. The movie's conceit takes a tidbit of biographical fact — Poe died under mysterious conditions, having been found on the streets in a state of delirium. The booze-weakened author helps hunt a serial killer he himself has inspired. Director James McTeigue was much more successful capturing graphic novelist Alan Moore's mood in "V for Vendetta" than he is conjuring the suspense of Poe. But viewed as simply another Hollywood thriller, "The Raven" builds up a decent head of steam as time runs out for our hero's imperiled fiancée. JOHN DEFORE THINK LIKE A MAN (PG-13, 120 minutes) An all-star revue of some of the most physically stunning actors in Hollywood, "Think Like a Man" is a pleasure if only on a purely sensory level. The nine main characters in "Think Like a Man" might be archetypes-bordering-on-stereotypes, but all manage to resemble authentic human beings, thanks to the terrific actors who play them: Taraji P. Henson, Meagan Good, Regina Hall and Gabrielle Union. Each of these gorgeous, high-achieving, self-aware women faces a specific dating problem for which Steve Harvey, author of the book the movie is based upon, has just the right advice. Forget hackneyed clichés about Players and Dreamers and the scheming women who seek to domesticate them. Focus on the pleasures of watching a group of gifted actors spar and seduce each other with genuine warmth, and "Think Like a Man" just might go straight to your head. A.H.

After only a year of dating, Tom (Jason Segel, right) proposes to Violet (Emily Blunt, left) in "The Five-Year Engagement." Clearly, it takes a bit longer to get to the altar.

Regina Hall, right and Terrence J, left, are among the several sets of on-screen pairs in "Think Like a Man."

We can't blame Barbara Cook: If we could choose anyone to come to the Kennedy Center and sing to us, it'd probably be Aaron Lazar. A Study in Sleuthing

'Sherlock' returns to PBS for a new set of modernized cases

Mystery

SUN 9:00 "Sherlock" returns for a second season on PBS' "Masterpiece Mystery!" A cheeky, cerebral delight, "Sherlock" updates Arthur Conan Doyle's detective series for the 21st century.

This series is a celebration of a great character and a nod to other TV characters who have descended from Holmes. As Sherlock, Benedict Cumberbatch's petulant, frequently unhinged behavior may remind some fans of a doctor named House. Like Hugh Laurie's character, Sherlock does not suffer fools, or anyone, it seems, except Dr. Watson (Martin Freeman), his trusted colleague and only friend. And even he gets his fair share of abuse. In another nod to modernity, many strangers take Holmes and Watson as a rather domesticated gay couple.

If "Sherlock" has a fault, it's the reliance on frequent, overly clever visual tricks that show us the detective's deductive powers. These quirks detract from the show's sparkling dialogue, which is punctuated with lightning-fast exchanges.

In Sunday's "Sherlock," the virginal Holmes comes under the spell of a dominatrix who seems to be blackmailing someone at the very apex of British power and celebrity. Next week, the series updates "The Hound of the Baskervilles" to the age of genetic engineering and biological warfare.

Horoscope

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Inspiration may be in short supply today, but you can still rise to the occasion and do much that is required. Style counts for much.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A trip down memory lane may cause you more grief than you had anticipated today. It's time to bid goodbye to a certain episode from your past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may have to take care of yourself today, as care from another may be in short supply — or simply unavailable for the time being.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are being asked to do more than you can reasonably be expected to accomplish at once. Make clear your limits and capabilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may not be able to do what you have been told today, simply because the circumstances you are facing are not at all suitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You must remain positive today, even in the face of a challenge that makes it seem as though you will not be accomplishing an important goal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You'll feel as though you have been set free in some way today. You can express yourself more openly and honestly to almost everyone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) The things that are most important to you have not changed — but the way you can secure them for yourself most certainly has.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll get much enjoyment out of watching someone else attempt something that is new to his or her repertoire.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You can't stop the clock today, but you can work with it to maximize the odds of success and position yourself more favorably.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You don't have to wait long today to get a yes or no from someone in charge. Whatever the answer is, you can decide.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You've been burning the candle at both ends, and you'll have a chance to catch up a little on sleep — and on social obligations.

DIFFICULT

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.

'Tour Buses Aren't Airtight?'

Police in Winston-Salem, N.C., cited rapper Wiz Khalifa and members of his band and staff for possession of marijuana Tuesday. An officer approached the tour bus and smelled marijuana. A search warrant said an officer seized a quantity of marijuana and drug paraphernalia, but police wouldn't say how much was found. (EXPRESS)

WE WERE WORRIED!

His Heirs Won't Starve!

PepsiCo Inc. is going on a reunion tour with The King of Pop. The company on Thursday announced its deal with the estate of Michael Jackson to use the late pop star's image for its new global marketing push. The nature of the promotion will vary by country, but will include special-edition cans bearing Jackson's image, a TV ad in some markets and chances to download remixes of Jackson songs. (AP)

Baby Names Parents 'Terrible' and 'Choices'

Levi Johnston, father of Bristol Palin's son, Tripp, plans to name his second child, with girlfriend Sunny Oglesby, "Breeze Beretta" after the Beretta handgun, he told "Inside Edition." Johnston proudly displayed a new tattoo reading "Breeze" on a bicep. Of the baby, Oglesby said, "We were out at the cabin for like, four days, and forgot the birth control." (EXPRESS)

"I'm someone who believes being bisexual is actually a thing. It's not made up. It's not a ... decision. It's not being greedy or numerous other ignorant things I've heard at this point."

— ANNA PAQUIN, IN AN INTERVIEW WITH ZOOEY MAGAZINE.
